Paul Lashmana brings a wealth of experience to the field of live streaming events. Notably, during the Covid-19 pandemic, he initiated Eurostream2020, an unofficial Eurovision Song Contest replacement stream, which received wide press attention as well as great viewing figures. He also has his own live streaming channel on Twitch, where he plays video games as well as cooks live on stream. This has led to him receiving a nomination for the Jamies, the Flemish streaming awards, in 2022, in the category of best newcomer. He is also a key producer for De Warmste Streamers, a charity of Flemish Twitch streamers, which raised money in excess of 60,000 EUR in the past three years.

In addition to his live streaming accomplishments, Paul has been an integral part of Eurovision in Concert (an annual Eurovision Song Contest fan concert in Amsterdam) since 2014, contributing motion graphics visuals to the event. Currently, he is employed by Belgium's leading university, KU Leuven, where he serves as a motion graphics designer within the in-house video production team. There, he also assists with the university's annual live streams for events such as the opening of the academic year and the presentation of honorary doctorates, showcasing his versatile skill set in video production and event coordination.

He has a degree in journalism as well as a bachelor in Sociology.
